BOY IS KILLED IN STOLEN CAR

EVERETT STILL, 14, VICTIM IN CRASH NEAR RAVENWOOD.

TWO THIEVES ESCAPE

Warren Hawk and Charles Dalton, St. Joseph, Flee Scene Of Accident. Captured In Box Car.

The trial of Charles Dalton and Warren Hawk was set for next Monday by Judge John M. Dawson in circuit court today.

The boys, both 18 years of age who live in St. Joseph, were in the Cadillac sedan yesterday in which Everett Lee Still was killed. Grand larceny charges were filed against them by George P. Wright, prosecuting attorney, as they were alleged to have stolen the sedan. Neither of the boys was able to furnish the $2,000 fixed by the court.

They said they would employ counsel.

A boy is dead, his father is in St. Francis hospital, a third member of the party is less seriously injured and two others are in the county jail here, as the result of an automobile accident yesterday morning near Ravenwood.

The boy, Everett Still, 14, was thrown from the car when it turned over, and the wheels were said to have passed over his body, breaking both his legs and causing other injuries. He died a few minutes later.

The father, Mike Still, has injuries to his shoulders and back, but he is expected by his physicians to recover. The Still family lives south of Maryville on the Barmann farm where Still has been working.

The third of the injured is Al Morrison, near Ravenwood, whose side was hurt but who is not in serious condition.

The two held in jail, charged with automobile theft, are Charles Dalton and Warren Hawk, both of St. Joseph, the latter a nephew of the elder Still.

Both Dalton and Hawk gave their ages as 18.

Stole Car in St. Joseph.

The two youths stole the car, a Cadillac sedan, in St. Joseph about 9:30 o'clock Saturday night, it is said, and drove to the Still home. Early yesterday morning, with Mr. and Mrs. Still and their seven children, they drove to the home of Morrison, about five miles north of Ravenwood. Mrs. Morrison and Mrs. Still are sisters.

About 10 a. m. yesterday the two St. Joseph boys, Still, his son and Morrison left the Morrison farm in the stolen car for Maryville. About four miles north of Ravenwood, with no apparent reason except that the car was going at an excessive speed and that the road was somewhat soft, Dalton, who was driving, lost control and the machine turned completely over two or three times, landing in the ditch with wheels in air.

Dalton and Hawk went to a nearby farmhouse, where they telephones for a physician, then disappeared. They were found yesterday afternoon, hiding in a railroad box car at Conception Junction, and were arrested by Lucian Slagle, deputy sheriff, and Gabe Purcell, constable. The deputy sheriff brought them to the jail here, where they remained today.

Dalton admitted at the jail, it was said, that he was driving fifty or sixty miles an hour at the time of the accident.

The automobile, whose top was smashed, was traced by its license number by Sheriff Lowell B. Campbell and found to be the property of F. B. Hassenbusch of St. Joseph.

Everett Still, the victim of the crash, would have been 15 years old in April. He had argued Saturday night against making the trip with the St. Joseph youths, it was said.

Dr. D. J. Hunterson of Ravenwood attended the boy at the scene of the accident, but he was near death before the physician arrived.

Funeral Tomorrow.

The boy victim's full name was Everett Lee Still and he was the only boy of a family of twelve children. The parents and seven of his sisters survive him. The sisters are Mrs. Amelia Hoke of St. Joseph, and Catherine, Mary Jane, Irena, Iretta, Malinda and Monika, all at home.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the home of Woodford Hawk, a brother of Mrs.

Dow Huntsman, farmer living three miles southwest of Hopkins, today was sentenced to three months in the county jail and fined $200 by Judge John M. Dawson in circuit court after he entered a plea of guilty to the charges of manufacturing and possessing intoxicating liquor.

Three other cases, possession of mash, possession of mash and tub, and manufacturing liquor, were dismissed by the prosecuting attorney, George Pat Wright.

The cases against Huntsman have been pending since the April, 1926, term of court. He was arrested by county officers April 3 and entered pleas of not guilty when first arraigned.

The information against Huntsman charged him with manufacture and possession of intoxicating liquor, "still beer." The mash found on his farm tested 12½ per-cent alcohol, county officers said.

Marvin McDonald and Elza Cox, both of Parnell, charged with transportation of intoxicating liquor, entered not guilty pleas and their bonds fixed at $1,000 each. They were arrested Friday night. Judge Dawson set their trial for Saturday, February 5.

The jury, which was called to assemble twice today, was excused until 10 o'clock Friday morning.

Parks, her children, Floyd H., aged 3 months, Thomas, age 8, and Buena V., jr., age 10, were injured in an automobile accident on the road two miles South of Savannah, July 25, 1926, due to the negligence of Davis, who was alleged to have been driving an auto in a careless manner.

Washington, Jan. 31.—The naval appropriations bill, carrying $1,200,000 for starting work on three new light cruisers, was laid aside by the Senate today but will be considered tomorrow.

The interruption of discussion resulted from the absence of several senators who desired to register a vote.

It was learned pressure is being exerted on senators to stand by the President in his opposition to the cruiser program. Mr. Coolidge holds passage of the initial cruiser appropriation might jeopardize his efforts for a new disarmament conference.

Administration leaders hope the delay will add strength to their side.

Nixon, "boy friend" of "Peaches" as a witness. They tried to get him to testify that he had bought underwear for Mrs. Browning while she was still Frances Heenan, that she had accompanied him to a hotel and had appeared in his hotel room clad in the underwear he allegedly had bought. But each question was ruled out by the court and nothing by way of evidence was added to the case.

THE CRIMINAL CODE BILLS.

The lawyers of the Missouri legislature, of which there are a large number, seem to be opposed to the bills offered by the Association for Criminal Justice. They charge that the bills were drawn by civil lawyers who know nothing about criminal law. The Association comes right back and names the men who wrote the different bills who are among the ablest criminal lawyers in the state.

The Association for Criminal Justice is made up of the Missouri Bar Association and is composed of former circuit and supreme court judges, former attorney generals and prosecuting attorneys and other leading lawyers who know full well the difficulties in the way of convicting shrewd criminals who are able to secure resourceful criminal lawyers to defend them, especially in the large cities.

These lawyers, among whom are former Governor Hadley, former attorney general Barrett, former Senator Wilfley, John T. Barker, former attorney general; Fred L. Williams, former member of the supreme court; James P. McBaine, dean of the law school of the University of Missouri; Judge R. E. Culver of St. Joseph, Judge John I. Williamson of Kansas City and Guy A. Thompson of St. Louis, have done a tremendous amount of research work during the past two years and have accumulated the actual facts and learned the conditions in all parts of the state. With great industry they have brought the whole situation right down to the legislature because they know the need for revision in the laws to cope with modern crime and modern criminals.

The difficulty does not seem to be any lack of knowledge of criminal law on the part of these gentlemen but in the fact that, as judges and former prosecutors, they view with more seriousness the disadvantages of the State in criminal cases. There are two kinds of lawyers who are familiar with criminal law. They are the judges and the prosecutors and there are those whose practice is largely in defending men against the charges of the State. The one wants the machinery tightened up while the other appreciates the utility of defects and escape holes in tight cases.

As the big cities are represented in large part by men engaged in criminal practice as defenders it will be largely up to the country members to make such revision of the present laws as is made. The greatest need for them is in the larger cities but, if they get relief, it will have to come through the country members from present indications.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER.
NEA Service Writer.

Washington.—It may be, as Senators Bruce and Wadsworth say, that very few senators can be prevailed upon to refuse a drink.

And not many of them can be prevailed upon to offer a fellow a drink.

An intoxicated senator is a very rare specimen for one's butterflynet. There are people who claim to have seen this inspiring sight, but there has been no obvious exhibition on the Senate floor during this session of Congress or, for that matter, even on the streets.

One cannot speak with such authority for members of the House, for they are harder to keep track of. A congressman is likely to look like almost anyone and it's hard to pick him out in a crowd.

Although your correspondent has made no searches through hippockets, desks, or drawers, it seems likely the common theory that every wet senator and nearly every dry senator either packs a flask or has a bottle tucked away in his office is rather a fallacy.

None of them has ever pulled out such a tap-root of evil in this correspondent's presence and it is still a puzzling problem just how strongly one must hint in order to effect such a phenomenon. Apparently one almost needs a club. A senator can stand and talk to a thirsty newspaperman with a breath that is very powerful and still neglect the first principles of hospitality.

Of course, one congressman promised always to have a drink available in his office and another to have his secretary bring a bottle back from New York after the holidays, but neither has ever produced and one of these days these perfidious deceivers may find themselves publicly exposed.

BARBS

Philadelphia clubwomen have joined a movement to have public libraries open on Sunday. Where is this wave of dissipation carrying us?

Senator Jim Reed has discovered that the presidential spokesman is Coolidge himself. Next thing you know some of these investigating senators is going to find out he's a Republican, too.

Perhaps Uncle Sam isn't popular with his wayward nephews and nieces just now, but did you ever see a rich uncle who was?

Chicago dentists say we should eat alfalfa. Do we have to eat it and smoke it, too?

Washington has seven debutantes who neither smoke nor drink, says a dispatch. Social talents certainly are waning in the capital.

What Other Editors Say

A BUSINESS STIMULANT.

(Springfield Leader)

Dr. Stratton D. Brooks, president of Missouri University, has made some interesting and timely remarks about higher education which is of interest to Springfield from a commercial as well as an educational standpoint.

"During the thirty-four year period ending in 1924, our total population increased 79 per cent, but our high school attendance increased 2,465 per cent," said Dr. Brooks. "As a result not only of this increased attendance in high school but of a rapidly increasing proportion of high school graduates who entered college, the attendance in institutions for higher education has experienced a phenomenal growth. During the period mentioned, the increase in attendance in normal schools and teachers' colleges was 60 per cent, while the college, university and professional school enrollment increased 352 per cent. It must furthermore be borne in mind that the major portion of this increase has occurred during the latter years of the period mentioned, and that the major portion of this increase has occurred during the latter years of the period mentioned, and that insofar as the teachers' colleges, the university and professionlutelyal schools are concerned, we are undoubtedly only at the beginning of an era of largely increased enrollment. For the area including Missouri and the neighboring states, the high school enrollment today is over twice what it was ten years ago. With this great horde of high school graduates seeking admission to colleges, it is clear that additional facilities must be immediately provided in order that the quality of college and university work may not be seriously decreased. The seriousness of the situation is well illustrated by the fact that last November the Association of American University Presidents, and the National Association of Land Grant Colleges, all discussed methods of limiting attendance. This discussion arose, not because the institutions desire to limit education, but because of their financial inability to provide buildings, equipment, and teachers sufficient to maintain the quality of the instruction.'

Dr. Brooks believes teachers' colleges will have a much greater attendance in a few years and as Springfield is the seat of such an institution the benefits to the city will be considerable.

As we also have a college which is not hampered in any way by state management there are great possibilities in that direction, also. Just what that development will be depends largely on money. Additional students call for more facilities and greater expense. The expense is well worth incurring for the benefit it will give to business.

TOO MUCH GOVERNMENT.

The ability of the American people for self-government is being undermined by the government's increasing regulation of and interference with private and business life, Senator Borah of Idaho, Republican, declares in an article in the current issue of the Nation's business.

Unless a halt is called, he predicts, it will be only a comparatively short time before there will be an officer for each ten persons in the republic.

"Every conceivable activity of mind and body will be under the direction and surveillance of a bureau," he adds. "Inspectors and spies will leer upon the citizen from every street corner and accompany him hourly in his daily avocation. Taxes will be $40.00 per capita. Forty per cent of the national income will be demanded for the public expenses.

"We will have a republic in name, but a bureaucracy in fact—the most wasteful, the most extravagant, the most demoralizing and deadly form of government God ever has permitted to torture the human family.

"The people must be taught that in encouraging the centralization of their affairs in Washington they are digging the grave of the American government as it was conceived by the Constitution makers.

"They must learn that in looking to the national capitol to cure their ailments they are weakening the fiber of true citizenship and destroying the self-reliant spirit of Americanism without which the republic cannot endure. And when congress must stop heeding every little group, which, like the tailors of Tooley street, petition us as 'we, the people of the United States.'"

"We have before us a task worthy of the finest intellects. Our agricultural problem, our transportation question, the regulation of our great natural monopolies, coal and water power, the extravagant and corrupt tendencies of government, state and national, the enforcement of law, the protection of human life and property, the bold attempts to debauch the electorate through the profligate use of money — all these cry out for our most serious attention.

"As we approach these problems it is most disturbing to encounter on every hand the erroneous belief that the way to meet these new questions is to effectuate some change in the structure of our government, and thus everybody is proposing a change until the whole structure is impliedly under condemnation.

"Our difficulties and our evils flow not from our form of government, but from our failure to appreciate and utilize, according to its great principles, the government we already have.

"It is easy to attack our government, but it is far more difficult, and it calls for greated industry and ability, to make wise use of the instruments which have been placed at our disposal.

"This clamor for change merely for change's sake, this haphazard floundering in legislative affairs, is nowhere and in no way more pronounced than in the gradual but certain destruction of the states and the centering of all governmental power in Washington.

"In this irresponsible vandalism the disciples of Hamilton and the apostles of Jefferson join hands. No political party in Washington seems willing to stand against this subtle revolution, against this un-american, un-democratic program."

ALLIES OUT OF GERMANY

DISARMAMENT CONTROL PASSES TO THE LEAGUE.

LONG STEP FORWARD

Termination of Allied Military Mission Approaches Ideal of "Neither Victor Nor Vanquished."

Geneva, Jan. 31.—The Allied Military Mission for the control of Germany's disarmament will cease to exist today, and beginning tomorrow the right of investigation to see that Germany remains within the disarmament limits fixed by the Versailles treaty will pass into the hands of the League of Nations.

In league circles the event is regarded as making one of the most important milestones yet reached in the gradual pacification of Europe since the war and in the disappearance of the various institutions set up under the Versailles treaty that divided Europe into two camps of victors and vanquished.

With the taking over of the right of investigation tomorrow by the League of Nations, Europe comes one long step nearer to the motto adopted at the Locarno conference of "neither victors nor vanquished." Hereafter the two camps will be re-united under the organization of the League of Nations with both sides enjoying equal rights.

A Thorn In Germany's Side.

The abolition today of the Allied Military Control Mission, which has been maintained in Germany for the past seven years, and which has always constituted a thorn in Germany's side and German pride, is the direct result of the agreement reached during the December council meeting of the League here by Briand, Chamberlain and Stressemann with the concurrence of Mr. Vandervelde of Belgium, Sicaloja of Italy and Ishii of Japan.

From the standpoint of the League of Nations, the event marks the almost total disappearance of various organisms that were created by the Versailles treaty, that functioned under the control of the Council of Ambassadors and which prevented the league from coming into full control of the European situation. The league's right of investigation into Germany's state of disarmament is specifically provided for under Article 213 of the Versailles treaty, but the existence to date of the Council of Ambassadors and the Allied Military Mission prevented the exercise of this right.

The settlement of this question leaves only two more important questions at issue between Germany and the Allies, the final settlement of which before the periods established by the Versailles treaty, would at last restore the European situation to about what it was before the war, at least as regards penalties imposed on Germany.

Two Other Questions.

These are the evacuation of the two bridgehead zones of Coblenz and Mayence, the former of which is to be evacuated ten years after the signing of the peace treaty, and the latter 15 years afterwards; and finally the question of the Saar, the final disposition of which is to be settled by a plebiscite also 15 years after the signing of the Versailles treaty.

As a result of the progress that has already been made by Briand and Stresemann in the matter of Franco-German collaboration, League circles are confident that these two questions will also be settled in the near future by amicable agreement, thus wiping out the last of the great penalties imposed on Germany as a result of the war and which still stand in the way of general European pacification.

It is expected that the Allies will consent to the evacuation of the Rhineland zones where France still maintains 52,000 soldiers; England 7,750 and Belgium, 6,700 in return for guarantees by Germany of French security and the right of Allied control in the zones to see that military movements are not undertaken against France.

It is expected that a settlement of the Saar question will be fixed in advance as the result of a financial arrangement between France and Germany. Thus leaguers see the whole of Europe gradually coming under the banner of collaboration in the league as the dominating organism of Europe in the maintenance of peace.

"SAFETY AND THE CHILD"

(By Matt F. Morse, General Manager Automobile Club of Missouri.)

There are thirteen commandments of safety which should be as religiously adhered to by children as are the original ten which Moses gave to the Children of Israel. These commandments of safety, if applied, will safeguard the children of America from personal injury even as the commandments of religion safeguard them from spiritual injury, if applied.

These commandments are as follows:

1. Don't play in the street. Stay on the sidewalk or in the back yard. The street is for automobiles. Automobiles are increasing. Streets are not. Every year the streets became dangerous.

2. Don't hitch rides. The first automobile victim of 1926 was a little boy killed hitching on.

3. Don't ride a bicycle in the street at night without a light, as so many children are wont to do.

4. Don't roller skate in the street.

5. Don't cross in the middle of the block. Always go to a corner. It is not a driver's fault if you are struck while in the middle of the street.

6. Don't try to beat an automobile across the street. You may lose. Remember it is better to lose a minute than to spend weeks, months, and possibly years in bed. Tell daddy and mother this.

Don't run past alleys; always stop and look.

8. Don't stand behind automobiles. Very often they back into people, hurting or killing them.

9. Don't stand in the street waiting to cross. Stand on the sidewalk until the road clears.

10. Don't try to beat a street-car. It is safest.

11. Don't "jay-walk". This means to take the shortest and most direct way to the opposite side of the street with nothing else on your mind.

12. Don't start across the street without looking in all directions. Very often cars dart around corners.

13. Only beggars mooch rides. Don't be a beggar.

Albany—County Agent L. A. Saunders has announced March 2 as the date for the second annual Clover and Prosperity meeting in Gentry County.

Anderson—The City Council here has paid another $1,000 on the water bonds, leaving an indebtedness of $7,000.

On Feb. 2 Ground Hog Will Say When He Expects Spring

Wednesday, Feb. 2 is ground hog day. The ground hog is the animal weather prophet. He, unlike other weather prophets, does not try to predict the weather for every day, but once a year he comes forth to give his opinion in general.

Early in the autumn the wood chuck, who is better known as the ground hog, goes to sleep in his winter quarters. He curls himself up in a little ball, with his nose under his paws so that he can keep his toes warm by breathing on them. Here he sleeps snugly all winter, and then, so the story goes, he awakens suddenly on Feb. 2, stretches himself, rubs his eyes and creeps out of his cozy nest to see how it looks outdoors. If he finds it cold and wet the earth covered with snow, and heavy gray clouds hanging low in the sky, he begins to look around, for he feels certain that soon the ground will be warm, and that the little birds will be coming out, for spring is surely on her way.

But if the sun is shining brightly and the first thing he sees is his own shadow, he pops back into his warm burrow as fast as he can, once more tucks his nose under his paws, and settles down to another six weeks' nap, for a cold late season is the only result that can be expected. He is certainly a pessimistic little animal.

Of course he is not always accurate in his prophecy, but then the best meteorologists also make mistakes.

Girls Here to Enter Meat Story Contest

Miss Mabel Cook, teacher of home economics at the Maryville High school, is entering a number of her students for competition in the Fourth National Meat Story contest which is just getting under way in high schools of the United States. Miss Cook has made request of the National Live Stock and Meat Board of Chicago, under whose auspices the contest is held annually, for the necessary number of entry blanks for her girls.

Those competing in the contest will soon begin the preparation of their stories, it is said, and the stories then must be forwarded to Chicago where they will be judged by a committee of home economics authorities. University scholarships and cash prizes are to be awarded to successful contestants in all sections of the country, according to the contest rules.

No restrictions are placed on subjects except that they must deal with some phase of the subject of meat or live stock. A few typical titles mentioned are "Meat—Its History and Uses," "Meat and Its Relation to Health," "The Story of Beef, Pork, or Lamb," "Meat, a Factor in Aggressive Civilization," "Meat Hints for the Young Housewife," "Bill Cutting Cuts and How I Cook Them," "The Value of Meat in the Diet," and "I Learn to Buy Meat."

What Jerry Says

Say, fellows, ain't it funny,
That without a hint of money,
We little budding sprouts at poetry
Forget about the dreams,
And go after other themes
Like the tariff and some vague conspiracy?

If I say the hall is dusty
And the hinges are all rusty,
And the dome lets in the blizzard and the sun,
They talk about Wall street,
And what they have to eat,
Or free coinage at about sixteen to one.

Mixing politics and religions
With a roosting place for pigeons,
Such things as those were never known to mix.
Recollect the price of oats,
Of butter, eggs and shoats,
When Grover held the reins in 'ninety-six?

It is really not too late,
When we've closed a long debate
On things that happened now or years ago,
To get out the plow and harrow
And start to work tomorrow,
And you will reap exactly what you sow.

Tears came into my eye
When you told about the cry
Our friend and Bess had 'neath the elm tree;
If they'll junk their old tin Lizzy,
And both of them get busy,
They'll get a world of sympathy from me.

Its very hard, it seems,
To get back to our dreams,
So many things sidetrack us on the way.
So with out more disgression,
From the original question,
This is what I started out to say,—

Though some may think me queer,
I say without a fear,
In the choicest English now at my command,
That the old court house is punk,
Stinketh worser than a skunk,
And on that simple statement I still stand.

RAVENWOOD COPS PARNELL TOURNAMENT

Defeats Bouncing Betties 36 to 15 Saturday Night—Comer of Ravenwood Makes Nine Field Baskets.

PARNELL BOYS BEAT WORTH HIGH

(By Harry Nelson)

Ravenwood, Nodaway County girls basketball champions defeated Parnell 36-15 at Parnell Saturday night in the final game of the Parnell tournament before the largest crowd that ever assembled to witness a court battle in Parnell.

The Bouncing Betties, pride of Parnell, were outplayed but put up a bitter fight with the flashy champions. Fine teamwork and uncanny ability to connect for two-pointers featured the Ravenwood offense. Parnell missed several setups which should have kept the winning margin narrower.

In the afternoon preliminaries Ravenwood downed Grant City 28-14, and Parnell ran rampant with Worth 30-8.

In the preliminary night game to the championship game the Parnell High School boys swamped the Worth High School 29-6. Batson, Parnell guard, was out of the srtating lineup with injuries and Cox, star center, went out after two minutes with a badly sprained ankle. This did not stem the winner's offense, and their defense bore an airtight nature.

DRIBBLE, PASS AND SHOOT

By A. Staffer.

High school basketball this year is in a more tangled form than any football season could imagine. Maryville lost to Savannah. St. Joseph Benton beat Savannah. Cameron beat St. Joseph Benton and Maryville beat Cameron. Who's Who and Why?

It has been rumored that the Heart of America Chapter is the leading De-Molay race in the League at Kansas City. The Spoofhounds defeated the Heart of America Chapter. Pickering journeys to Maryville and takes the Spoofhound's scalps. So that makes Pickering champions of the World. Anyway, something like that.

Didja ever stop to think that there is not a Maryville player on the Bearcat first string this year. And, looking further, have you seen any Maryville lad even on the Teachers' squad? First time in history. So history is being made this year.

All other teams except Maryville in the M. I. A. A. have had more points scored against them then they have scored. Even Warrensburg, whose basket heavers have won three and lost one, lack one point of having as many points on the credit side of the ledger as there are scored by opponents.

And by the way, out at the institution on the hill the last week-end, H. Frank and Paul, coaches, certified thirteen men eligible to play against the Springfielders. But the unlucky number had no effect on the results of the games.

There's been a basketball fan driving in fifteen miles every time the Bearcats play. He is an ardent booster of the Ungles and Conners combination on the Teachers squad. And he has reason to be, for John Gex, of near Graham, watched these two boys grow up and learn their court antics on the Maitland team that had such a shining career a few years ago.

How Much Will Babe Get Asks Fan World

With Ruth Salary Fixed, Speaker and Ty Settled, Baseball Lull Is Forseen.

New York, Jan. 31.—In the midst of a calm, following a storm that had baseball's waters troubled for months, there remains now only as absorbing topics the discussion of where Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker will play next season and—how much will the Babe get?

Perhaps the question of the salary that the prize elephant of the New York Yankees will get in his new contract is more interesting to the general public than the future of Cobb and Speaker because their reputations have been salvaged and they will play somewhere in the American League next year.

Throughout an off season when the private and professional affairs of the game's greatest stars were being aired in the baseball courts, the smiling map of the Babe's was about the only one at which some kind of bricks were not being tossed and if the Babe wasn't smart enough it he is in the hands of one Christy Walsh who does know.

When the Babe finished the season last year in a blaze of glory in the world's series he hung a dead contract on the wall calling for $52,000 a year. It was a nice looking souvenir and the Babe is said to have remarked to himself—"the next one, when I hang it in the trophy room, will be better looking than that."

PICKERING BOYS, ELMO GIRLS WIN

Burlington - Hopkins Game Features Tournament At Hopkins—Iowa Team Is Eliminated.

HOPKINS GIRLS BEAT JUNCTION.

Although Pickering added another championship and loving cup to its many laurels by winning the Hopkins High School Basketball tourney Saturday, the real thriller of the tournament was the game between the Burlington Junction and Hopkins boys, in which the dopsters were again baffled.

While Pickering defeated Hopkins 32 to 11 in the final game of the boys' contests the Elmo girls won the tourney for sextets by defeating the Hopkins girls 24 to 18.

It was the fifth annual Hopkins tournament and the Hopkins High School Athletic Association awarded silver loving cups to the winners.

The Elmo girls took a corner on the finals after an easy game with the Conway, Ia., team by a 29 to 16 tally. Pickering downed the Elmo boys in the second game of the afternoon with apparent ease, chalking up a 37 to 14 score.

Burlington, touted to go to the finals, found a resistant defense when Hopkins took the floor. The Hopkins boys exerted themselves to find the basket, and found it nine times while Burlington Junction was credited with six field baskets.

Baker was high point man with ten points but was called to the bench after the fourth personal was called.

Both the final contests were sluggish affairs. The Hopkins girls dropped a slow contest and the Pickering-Hopkins go was little more than exciting with a tired Hopkins team. The Bulldogs played a "dormant" game while Pickering played its usual steady game.

Sam Dubin of Bedford, Ia., worked the six games. The largest crowd ever entertained in the high school gymnasium at Hopkins witnessed the final contest.

The results of the preliminary games:

Elmo girls, 29; Conway, 16; Burlington Junction girls, 16; Hopkins, 23e.

Burlington Junction boys, 19; Hopkins, 21; Elmo boys, 14; Pickering, 37.

Conception College Loses to St. Joseph Knights of Columbus

Conception College basketeers lost a hard game at St. Joseph Saturday night to the Knights of Columbus team of that place, 42 to 33.

The St. Joseph Gazette said:

"The Conception college cagers were a hefty lot, and rather shifty in spite of their weight. They gave the Knights a furious battle for three periods but dropped behind in the final chapter when the locals spurted. Dempsey's long shot from the center of the court was a beauty.

"Reising of the Conception team, gave the Knights a lot of trouble. He had a penchant for sinking shots through the hoop from the most unexpected places. He tallied six times from the field.

"Johnny Powers played a stellar defensive game for the Knights, taking the ball from the backboard time after time to start it down the court. Powers seldom failed to recover the ball after a Conception player had flung at the basket.

Rallying around the leadership of Leon Ungles, the State Teachers College Bearcats gave the Springfield Teachers a sound drubbing on the local court Saturday night, for the second victory of a two-game basketball series played here. The score was 39 to 24, a fair margin of victory.

The Bearcats won the game Saturday night because they were by far the better team. They displayed no startling basketball, however, and for the first seven minutes of the game Springfield threatened to turn the tables and get revenge for the 45-21 trimming of the night before.

The game started with a mad tussle after the ball, and both teams connected with the basket early. The score went to the Bearcats' favor in the early minutes on a pair of free throws by Burks. Then came a Springfield one-pointer, and then Captain Joy tossed a charity point for the Bearcats.

Tied Four Times.

The visitors retaliated with a field goal and the count was knotted at 3-all. It was also tied when each team had 5, 7 and 9, but after this the Maryville team forged into the lead, to hold a seven-point advantage at the half, the score being 18 to 11.

Ungles was the mainstay of the Maryville team, particularly in the first half. In this period, when his teammates were having difficulty in connecting with the basket from the field, the diminutive lad from Maitland upheld the scoring with four field goals and a free toss. In the second half he added two field goals and two points from the free-throw line, to make himself high-point man of the game, with 15.

Paul Burks, center, and Orville Hedges, forward, raced for second position in scoring, the former winning by a free throw. He made 10 points to 9 for Hedges.

Captain Fox of Springfield was the only visitor with any ability to score consistently. He netted 13 points during the game. Several times he crept behind the Maryville guards to score easily from a short distance.

Springfield Drops to Bottom.

As a result of the games against the Bearcats, the Springfield team dropped to the bottom of the percentage column in the M. I. A. A. The Bears started a quartet of conference games when they played here. Tonight and tomorrow night they will be in action against the Kirksville State Teachers College Bulldogs at Kirksville.

The games last week were two more feathers in the cap of H. Frank Lawrence, the Maryville coach. Lawrence started the season this year with a championship to defend and minus Ray Blomfield, his mile-high threat of last year. Lawrence had to develop a jumping center to fill Blomfield's shoes, and local fandom is quite satisfied with the results obtained.

The Bearcats will be idle as far as conference games are concerned until February 9, when they will open a road trip with a game at Cape Girardeau. They will then go to Kirksville for games on February 11 and 12. The Hillyards, national champions, play here next Friday night.

Cures Piles Now Without Surgery

A most successful method for removing piles entirely and for good is now being used by Dr. O. A. Johnson, well known rectal specialist. He does not use the knife, acids, electricity, burning, tying off, cautery, ligatures or other painful, drastic means. Yet the piles are removed as cleanly and entirely as if they had been cut out. His method does away with pain, danger, expense, and inconvenience of a surgical operation and accomplishes even better results, as it leaves no scar tissues.

Every sufferer from bleeding, protruding piles, and other rectal troubles should write at once for his book that explains his amazing method. He will gladly mail any one who will write for one, as he wants every sufferer to know how easily, quickly and safely they may be rid of their piles for good. Simply send name and address to Dr. O. A. Johnson, suite 134-C, 1324 Main St., Kansas City, Mo. Piles often may cause many other troubles, such as headaches, backaches, rheumatism, stomach trouble, sciatica, nervousness, etc. Getting rid of piles means also getting rid of the many diseases they cause.

The Value of Research

"Every application of science which results in lower production costs, through either a saving in labor or in raw materials, or which gives a new useful product or increases the use of old products, is directly beneficial to every man, woman and child living in the areas served by the industries making the improvement. The benefits extend even beyond that, they go to generations yet to come and to remote corners of the earth."

This quotation from the book, "What Price Progress?" by Hugh Farrell, explains briefly the value to the world of research in industry.

Throughout many years, scientific research has played an important part in the operations of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana).

In the petroleum industry, this Company has taken a leading part in reducing nebulous theories to acknowledged facts and in eliminating guess work from the manufacture of petroleum products.

Practically every major product manufactured by this Company is directly attributable to intensive research work, extending over long periods of time in the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) laboratories.

The important role of science in the modern world is but dimly understood by the public. People who can remember the living conditions of fifty years ago, realize that spectacular changes have taken place, but few stop to think that practically all these changes can be traced to one source.

Back of every discovery and every invention that have contributed to the health and happiness of mankind, science has been at work.

Telephones, bathtubs, automobiles, radios, airplanes—all of the new comforts and pleasures that have been added to our life have been the result of research.

Science has been applied in industry to improve old products and create new ones, to devise better methods, to lower costs of production through savings in labor and raw materials. Practically everything you buy or use has more than one scientific chapter in the history of its development.

Scientists working in their laboratories, experimenting, studying known facts and exploring the unknown, have been responsible for the revolutionary changes that have made this world a more habitable place.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) acknowledges tribute to science. It believes that success in any business demands a broad knowledge of all underlying facts, and a constant pursuit of new facts.

Research work plays an important part in enabling the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) to produce uniform, dependable products of the finest quality at the lowest possible cost.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is constantly applying science to the big business of serving in a big way the thirty million people of the Middle West.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED BEFORE

By means of a plot engineered by James Mulholland and five aides, Ames, Chester, Fenne, Quantrill and Vercker, Robert Masterton is sentenced to Atlanta. While there, Vercker, who has been sentenced on another charge, reveals, while dying, the names of the plotters on Masterton's promise not to invoke the law but to take vengeance into his own hands. Masterton is in love with Cynthia Knowles, a rich and beautiful young woman. Her faith in him shattered, she marries Mulholland. On her wedding day she gets an anonymous note accusing her husband of the plot to railroad Masterton to jail. Masterton's grandfather dies and leaves him six million dollars. He is freed. Back in New York he gives Sadie Hicks, hungry and out of a job, a position as his private secretary. He meets Cynthia, refuses to allow her to blame herself for her lack of faith in him and tells her she is the only woman he will ever love. Fenne offers information to Masterton who goes to his room. Chester calling the next morning finds Fenne murdered. Quantrill, Ames and Chester begin to fear Masterton's vengeance. Fenne is declared a suicide and the conspirators plan to make an ally of Talbot, Masterton's valet. Ames has a talk with Talbot. Ames offers Talbot $5,000 for certain papers regarding Fenne which he thinks Masterton has in his possession. Ames finds himself face to face with Masterton on a houseboat. Ames mysteriously disappears and a detective questions Mulholland. Cynthia overhears the conversation and asks Mulholland to explain. Cynthia see Masterton and realizes that the only thing she cares about is his love for her. Masterton leaves town and gives Sadie $500 for personal expenses. Chester sets out to wreak vengeance on Masterton. He thinks he has him cornered but Masterton makes him a prisoner.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER 39

After the Storm

Masterton shook his head.

"I hate a sitting shot," he said. "By the way, why didn't you shoot, Chester, when you came up to my bungalow window and found so pretty an opportunity?"

"How do you know I didn't?" said Chester.

Masterton passed his hand along the barrel of the gun and ran his finger inside the twin muzzles.

"Both barrels clean. Besides I should have heard the report."

Chester felt a shiver run through him.

Masterton went on: "You didn't fire because, like me, you hate a sitting shot. It's a matter of temperament. Murder's an ugly, dirty business, especially when done from behind cover. You felt you had to give me some sort of a show, however small. I thought you'd feel like that. It's just that much in your favor. The trick fooled you all right."

"Set me ashore then," said Chester, hoarsely. "I give up. You won't see or hear anything more of me. Let me go."

Masterton caressed the barrel of the gun.

"By no means," he said. "That doesn't absolve you. There's only one thing can balance the account between you and me."

He reached out a hand to the shroud and cast loose the painter of the sneakboat, which drifted rapidly away in the darkness.

"We shall not want her," he said. "I suppose this is your only gun?"

"There's another in the cabin."

"Then you'll keep out of the cabin for the present. Those are my orders. You'll obey my orders for the next half hour. You've no choice."

"What do you think you are going to do?"

"We are going to sea," said Masterton. "For we are much too near my front doorstep. We're going to sea, and one of us will not come back. Possibly neither of us will. I can't see your face very plainly in the starlight, but the idea seems to suit you."

"Much I care what comes of it, either way!"

"You are a fatalist! So am I. Take a look around you, and you'll notice that while waiting for you I've tied down three reefs in the sail, and stopped the storm jib along the bowsprit. We shall want easy canvas for it's blowing very hard now.

"Go forward, slip the kedge, hoist the sails and steer her out! I'll give you your course; I sit here in command. Be very careful not to take a chance or I shall blow you in two halves without the smallest hesitation."

Chester remained motionless for a few moments. Then he went forward briskly, slipped the anchor rope, and seized the jib halyards to hoist the sail. The water was white with little waves that flashed in the darkness, and from the eastward came the roar of the sea breaking over the shores by the Hamptons.

"It will be rough outside tonight," said Masterton quietly. "Give another pull on the peak halyard. Now get the wind sits in the shoulder of your hands on the tiller. So. your sail. And you are stayed for . . . ."

Sadie Hicks sat at her desk with a pile of newspapers before her, a large pair of scissors in her small white hand, and an exceedingly anxious expression on her face.

For the papers gave colums describing the storm havor wrought on Monday night—it was now Wednesday morning.

Her attention was rived by headline

LOSS OF A YACHT

The sloop Vixen, property of the well known actor St. John Chester, who, as all his friends are aware, is an enthusiastic amateur sailor, is reported wrecked off Montauk. It is not known who was on board her at the time, and there is no news of Mr. Chester's whereabouts.

A water-logged motor dinghy, recognized as belonging to Mr. Robert Masterton who recently bought Osea Island, was cast ashore near New London. Much anxiety is felt for the owner, of whom nothing has since been heard, and investigations at Osea have so far failed to throw any light on the matter. It is believed Mr. Masterton went duck shooting and was caught in the storm.

Sadie read the paragraph through twice; the second reading was ineffective, for she was not able to see very well, She pulled a little square of cambric out of her sleeve and brushed it across her eyes.

Then, always efficient and methodical, she cut both paragraphs out of the paper, filed and docketed the clippings with a bunch of a dozen others, and locked them away in a drawer.

She rose from her seat and stood staring out of the window rather blindly. In a few moments, however, a look of determination and confidence came back into her face.

Just then the telephone bell whirred sharply and made her start; her nerves were less steady than usual. She hurried to the instrument and took the receiver down. A woman's voice, one quite unknown to her, sounded in her ear.

"Is there any news of Mr. Masterton? What has happened?"

"Mr. Masterton not returned yet," said Sadie briefly.

Her ear was quick, and though the voice was controlled she detected agitation in it.

But surely you must know something! Is it certain he was at Osea on Monday? Tell me. He is a friend of mine—it is very urgent."

"Who's speaking?" asked Sadie.

"Mrs.—Mulholland."

She caught a hesitation between the two words. For the second time Sadie started; she lowered the receiver, and a curious change came over her face. Her eyes hardened.

"That woman?" she said.

She put the transmitter to her lips again.

"Very well. If he returns here you will be informed. Nothing certain yet."

"Who is answering?" exclaimed the voice.

"I'm Mr. Masterton's private secretary. I'm handling all his affairs in his absence."

"Will you come here and see me at once?" said the voice shakily. "It is urgent. Please come!"

Sadie flung up the receiver without replying.

"Gee!" she murmured, her lips compressed. "I expected something like this."

Eight Years—and Still Hopeful

Although he has been in bed for eight years, Robert Conway, patient at the Kansas City Veterans' Hospital, hasn't given up hope that he'll be able to walk some day. His spine was injured in an auto accident at training camp, and he hasn't even the consolation of having been wounded in battle. But still he smiles. Doctors say he may be able to go about on crutches "some day."

Congress Operates a Bank of Its Own

Capitol Institution Handles $10,000,000 a Year, But All the Money Is Paid Out.

Washington, Jan. 29.—The United States House of Representatives has established a bank of its own which handles $10,000,000 a year and business is picking up.

The bank was instituted as a part of the office of the sergeant at arms and has its own counting room on the first floor of the Capitol building.

Technically it isn't a very profitable enterprise since all the money goes out. But it is a great accommodation to the members of the house.

Originally the bank was started as a pay window to render representatives their salaries, but the requirements for cashing checks and taking care of little banking accounts of congressmen in local downtown banks necessitated its development into a regular financial institution.

Under the increase in salary voted by congress for itself the bank pays out $367,083.33 each month to house members.

Kenneth Romney is unofficial president and board of directors too. He has been serving as paymaster for the last ten years to such satisfaction that no change in his position is made with changes in administration. During his tenure of office, business has nearly doubled. He cashes more checks on different banks than any other financial institution, as customers come from every congressional district in the country.

The mileage costs of congressmen coming to Washington for each session is an important item in the handling of this bank. Yearly this one provision costs something around $275,000. The members are allowed 20 cents a mile each way. The amounts to be paid range from $8 paid to a Virginia congressman, who lives across the river, to $1,453 which was paid the late Rep. Baker of Cal., and $2,078.80 paid to the territorial delegate from Hawaii.

This bank will never fail as long as the United States Treasury stands upon its foundations at the other end of Pennsylvania avenue.

TREASURE IS BURIED IN N.D.

$100,000 IN GOLD DUST HID FROM INDIANS.

MISER'S HOARD SOUGHT

Old Family Map, Key To One Mystery Recently Stolen; Many Search For Wealth.

Kensal, N. D., Jan. 29.—Two small fortunes lie buried somewhere in this vicinity.

One of these consists of $100,000 in gold dust, hastily secreted as three prospectors, returning from the Montana gold rush years ago, were pursued and overtaken by Indians. The other is the hoard of a miser who died from the effect of eating five cents' worth of ice cream—the first nickle he ever squandered.

Many secretive expeditions, some coming from a long distance, have been formed, and fortune tellers have been consulted in hopes of finding the lost gold, but so far as is known, there has been no success.

The only key to the gold dust mystery, a faded old map, treasured for years in the family Bible of a resident of this vicinity, has recently been stolen. But before the map was drawn by the one prospector who survived the Indians attack, modern farming had changed the topography of the country and the map proved little help.

According to the sole prospector who survived, the three were traveling down the Fort Totten trail from Fort Totten to Fort Seward, where James town now stands. When they saw they were pursued, they first hid in some old rifle pits, but later went to a lake. Hardly had they finished hiding their treasure when the Indians arrived and killed two of the three. The third remained in the lake the rest of the night and then continued to Fort Seward. He continued to his home in Wisconsin and each year planned to return to Dakota territory and recover the fortune. On his death bed he told a friend and gave the latter a map.

The friend, fearful that his secret would be discovered, traveled through this section as a honey peddler. The plows of the farmers had levelled the rifle pits. There were other changes and the map at this man's death was again bequeathed.

It was shortly after the first railroad crossed this section that the owner of the other lost treasure walked eight miles to his nearest town to celebrate the Fourth of July. He ate a dish of ice cream to cool himself and died before morning.

The old house he lived in is gone. The stones that held it up have been uprooted. Holes have been dug in vain hope that the gold he is known to have buried may be found.

Sikeston—A new $75,000 postoffice building is assured for this city. Congress having passed a bill authorizing an appropriation for its erection. It is not known when construction will begin.

West Plains—Mr. and Mrs. Ed Burroughs, of this city, received an income of $2,120 for their flock of White Leghorns last year and spent $605 for feed. They estimate a profit of $3.95 per hen.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

1927 Will Be Significant Year in Chinese History

For weeks cable despatches from China have described outbreaks of varying consequence directed against foreigners. These culminated when Great Britain, so long supreme in the Far East, was required to relinquish her concession at Hankow. To readers in this country the Chinese situation doubtlessly means most in terms of danger to Americans in China, especially to American missionaries. But what is now going on in China is of more significance than danger to individuals. The accompanying series of articles by Randall Gould, United Press correspondent at Peking, explains the background of events which may lead in the near future to a renaissance of China as a world power. For more than a century the greatest population in the world has been supine as a nation. There are many indications now, according to Gould, that the Chinese giant is awakening, that the present undercurrent against foreigners will continue, and that, again united, China may stand out soon as a world power if it develops the most important event of this country except for the world war. The series beginning today will describe the personalities, the size of armies, the geography, the commercial phases, and other elements clarifying the Chinese situation.

By RANDALL GOULD.

(United Press Staff Correspondent).

Peking, Jan. 31.—Will 1927 witness a solution of the Great Chinese Puzzle?

A few weeks ago the asking witness of such a question would have brought a smile to the face of anyone versed in China's complex political, military and economic tangles.

While it is equally true that no complete solution can be achieved in a single year, observers here feel that movements tending toward such a solution are so definitely under way that 1927 will prove by far the most significant years of the Chinese Republic yet recorded.

Chinese wars, Chinese political overturns, Chinese pleas and demands for freedom from foreign oppression, have become commonplace in the news columns. Many students of international affairs feel on the point of abandoning the ungrateful task of trying to understand the incomprehensible. But times in China are changing and the saving element of sanity is beginning to creep into Chinese affairs.

This does not mean that the country is due for an over-night change of heart and body. Disorders exist, and they may conceivably grow. Foreigners in China may find the country increasingly difficult to live in and to profit from. But these are minor details if the great underlying trend is toward growth and unity, and the eventual result, perhaps, true enough, to be achieved only after many years, should be beneficial to Chinese and to foreigners.

Nationalism has become a living force in the country, and it is Nationalism, in the view of forward-looking Chinese and foreign observers alike, which will in time bring about this growth and unity.

By the word Nationalism one does not necessarily mean any given group of political or military leaders. Canton, cradle of the Nationalism movement, saw many an internal overturn before the present important northern campaign was ever started. Doubtless there will be many more. Individuals are less important than the cause in this movement, and no one realizes it better than do the present leaders.

It is entirely reasonable that newspaper readers in other lands should have found the various enterprises of Wu Pei-fu, Chang Tso-lin, Tsao Kun, Li Yuan-hung and the rest confusing and tedious. In general, the exploits of such gentry as the foregoing may be dismissed, from the standpoint of the ordinary newspaper reader, as comparatively unimportant and devoid of significance.

This may seem a broad assertion, considering the fact that their doings have made up the bulk of the news from China for years back. It is an assertion based on a single fact which seems indisputable, namely, that each of the various luminaries which has thus far flashed across the Chinese sky and vanished has based his achievements solely on a personal basis.

The one exception was the late Sun Yat-sen. Dr. Sun was the one notable figure with both ideas and ideals. Impractical and almost futile in actual life he may have been, as his critics charge, but it is "Sun Won" alone of them all who lives and will continue to live as "the Lenin of the Nationalist Movement of China."

Let it be emphasized once more that this is a wholly non-partisan statement. Nationalism has gone completely beyond any single group, though the Nationalist Government is at present dominated by the only real political party in China today—the Kuomintang, or People's Party. Indeed, proponents of the Nationalist movement see in its very universality its greatest danger, that it will become so diluted as to be unmanageable.

Certainly the continued success of Nationalism is bound to bring more and more men of diverse ideas into the fold. Already the radicals, the idealists, chafe under the restraints imposed by the practical business men with whom they are allied. Nationalism may yet serve to unite the country only to afford a scene for many a hard-fought battle of varying ideas and purposes.

But for the time being, Nationalism is furnishing the one real platform which may be found in all China; it is giving a rallying point and a cause beyond the mere exploitation of some so-called "strong men." So far as there is any public opinion in China, it seems to favor Nationalism. So far as there is unselfish devotion to any cause in China, the Nationalists have it all to themselves.

Closing Grain Review.
Chicago, Jan. 31.—Big receipts in the West and Southwest put pressure on the market which caused wheat to close fractionally lower than Saturday on the Chicago board of trade.
Kansas City had 377 cars against 136 cars a year ago and Omaha arrivals were 110 cars, while there were 61 cars at Chicago. The big run militated against the bulls, but the steady tone of the market was suggestive of quiet and effective support.
The cash market was unchanged.
Export business over the week-end was placed at 250,000 bushels.
Corn was in slow demand and prices settled back slightly. Receipts were 395 cars. The cash market was ½ cent lower.
Oats were off fractionally in sympathy with other grains. Receipts were 162 cars. The cash market was ½ cent lower.
Provisions closed lower.

PRATHER ON 'TEMPTATION'

KINGDOM OF EVIL TO BE OVERTHROWN.

HELP FOR TEMPTED

"Jesus Wants Loving Devotion Of Intelligent Hearts," Pastor Of First Baptist Church Declares.

"There is a great kingdom of evil, presided over by Satan, of great power, yet limited by God himself, and of whose origin and reason for existence we can but faintly guess," said the Rev. Guy L. Prather in his sermon on "Our Strength in Temptation," at the First Baptist Church yesterday. "In the age-long conflict between right and wrong, the Kingdom of evil will be finally overthrown. In this Scripture the rulers of the two great Kingdoms meet in conflict.

"The appeal is first made to the physical appetite.

"Such appetites are good and necessary. But they may be abused and made a source of monstrous evils. But satisfaction for such appetites is not the supreme thing. There are higher values.

"It was meant that Jesus should bear temptation to the limit. That was the purpose of his stay in the wilderness. Alone, and without aid from sympathetic hearts; weakened in body by the long fast; he is capable of feeling the keenest thrust of the enemy, and would seem to be weakest in resistance. But he is in God's hands. God has led him to the conflict. He will stay and bear the load until His Father says, 'It is enough.' He will not use his power to alter hard conditions that God has ordained for him.

"A wholesome touch with God is better than bread. It is more essential. It may be manifested in the eating of bread. 'Whether ye eat or drink, do all to the glory of God.'

"The second appeal is for spectacular display, and assertion of position in presumptuous ways.

"A foolish test of God's protecting power is proposed. God does protest his own. But he has also given us a mind and will to know and chose what is right. Foolish exposure to danger will bring grief. God does not save by sleight of hand tricks.

"Nor does Jesus by such methods win the hearts of men. He wants the loving devotion of intelligent hearts and not superstitious reverence cultivated through ignorance and fraud.

"The third appeal is to ambition and the desire for power.

"He causes Jesus to see the nations and their glories. We cannot tell how much of the ancient corruption and woe he tried to hide from Jesus' gaze.

"There is much truth in Satan's claim of power and dominion. But Jesus refuses to recognize his authority, refuses to bow before him, rebukes and drives him away. Satan is a usurper and a tyrant. He has no rightful or useful place in human life. The victory is with Jesus, though the contest is to be often renewed, and long continued, even age-long and in every heart that vows allegiance to the Christ.

"Jesus had strength from his use of God's Word. Being tempted, Jesus is able to help them that are tempted. Our temptations are common to man. God will help us to escape or to bear the conflict. Not by the sword do we win, but by strenght of heart from God."

Presbyterians Will Meet at Mexico, Feb. 2

Would Close $600,000 Campaign for Synodical College, Fulton, and Religious Work at Columbia.

Marshall, Mo., Jan. 31.—Representatives of Missouri Presbyterians of the United States will meet together at Mexico, Mo., February 2, to discuss plans for bringing to a close the $600,000 campaign for Synodical college, Fulton, and religious work among the Presbyterian students and the University of Missouri, Columbia. The halfway mark has already been reached in the campaign.

The Synodical college board will meet here February 1 for a short session and will then hold a joint meeting with the board on university work and the campaign committee Wednesday afternoon. A large attendance is expected at both meetings.

The Rev. J. Layton Manze, formerly pastor of the Central Presbyterian church, St. Louis, and now of Huntington, West Virginia, will be the principal speaker.

Poplar Bluff—Definite plans for extensive advertising of the Big Springs country of the Ozarks were discussed at a recent meeting of the Missouri Ozarks Chamber of Commerce.

Boy Is Killed in Stolen Car

Still, at 916 East Thompson street, this city. Burial will be in Oak Hill cemetery.

At the hospital this morning the father said the St. Joseph youths drove into the Still yard at midnight Saturday night. Hawk proposed to drive on to the home of his other uncle, Morrison, the same night, but was prevailed upon to remain over night, Still said.

"There is a bad place in the Ravenwood road, and if the boys drove at the rate they said they had come from St. Joseph I knew they would be killed," he explained.

The youth's told Still the car belonged to Dalton's sister.

"Yesterday morning they asked us all to go up to Morrisons' with them," Still continued. "They drove very nice then.

To Maryville to Buy Car.

"Mr. Morrison wanted to come to Maryville to buy a Chevrolet car, so we started out—but we didn't get far. We were going fast, and it felt like Dalton changed gears or something; anyway the rear end swung around and we went over. The car turned over three times—some said five. Brother—that's what we called Everett—was thrown through the glass the first time and the car went over on him."

Still said his nephew, Hawk, had been "reckless" for a long time and that "while he hasn't served any time, he probably has it coming to him."

He said Morrison had a substantial amount of money with him, with which to make a payment on the car he proposed to buy, and Still suggested that the St. Joseph youths might have planned intentionally to ditch the car and then rob their companions. They did not attempt anything of the kind, however.

Still this morning was "mighty sore." He said both he and Morrison had been pinned in the car for several minutes.

No one in the party had been drinking, Still said.

Same Story by Morrison.

Morrison said this morning that the car was going about 40 or 45 miles an hour, and that the road was good, but soft. Mr. Morrison thought the car turned over three times and that young Still was thrown out on the window of the sedan the second time it turned over.

Morrison said that Hawk and Dalton, with the Still family, arrived at his place, on the Judge W. T. Jackson farm, about four and a half miles north of Ravenwood, about 9 o'clock yesterday morning. Morrison said they proposed to bring him to Maryville to look over a Chevrolet car which was on the market for sale here. Morrison thought they left shortly after 9 o'clock.

It was sometime before anyone arrived on the scene of the accident, according to Morrison. He said Hawk and Dalton set out on foot and that he himself was able to walk and caught a ride to the Frank Myers home, south of the scene of the accident, and there he used the telephone to call a physician.

Morrison claims he did not know the car was stolen. He says the boys said they had to have the car back in St. Joseph by Monday morning and agreed with Still that they said the car belonged to the sister and brother-in-law of Dalton.

Morrison was still sore this morning but was able to be up and around.

Man's Thought of God Is Progressive

"Final Truth Stands On the Printed Page of the Divine Book," Dewar Tells Hearers.

"Man's thoubht of God has been progressive," declared the Rev. W. N. Dewar, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, yesterday. "It lies within the field of theology and our theological thought is subject to modification, revision, enlargement and above all to change.

"Man does not stand still here anymore than he does in any of the realms in which the human mind is active.

"Our thought of God today is far removed from the thought of early primitive man of God and his workings, it differs widely from the mediaval man's thought of God, our thought of God is not even that of the man of Old Testament times, and it has not yet reached the splendor and beauty and magnitude of the thought of God as revealed by the mind, and spirit and life of Jesus.

"Our thought of God has its beginning in Christ who is the final and ultimate in perfect revelation of God. I do not believe that there will ever come any other, for there can be no other who will give us a more transcendent, nor glorious, more perfect revelation and thought of God.

"The final truth stands on the printed page of God's divine Book awaiting our careful and earnest and solemn investigation.

Wealth? Yes; Happiness? No

Her husband's millions failed to bring martial happiness to Mr. Horace E. Dodge, jr., wife of the son of the late automobile manufacturer. Mr. Dodge, who was Miss Lois Knowlson, has brought suit for divorce at Detroit. She is pictured above with the two Dodge children at the Grosse Point, Mich., palace, built for her by young Dodge (below), who is said to be in Paris. The Dodges were married in 1921. "It's a bad thing to have too much money," Mrs. Dodge's father, A. T. Knowlson, was quoted as commenting when the suite was filed.

Julius Berg Sues for $2,000 Damages

Alleges He Brought Note From Platte Valley Bank on Representations by J. S. Casteel.

A suit was filed today by Julius Berg against the Platte Valley Bank and J. S. Casteel of Ravenwood for damages of $2,000, Berg claiming misrepresentation in taking over a note from the bank.

The petition states Berg on Feb. 27, 1923, bought a note from the Platte Valley Bank on representation made by Casteel, its cashier, the note being signed by Elmer C. McKee and Martha P. McKee, in the sum of $2,000. Berg claims he left the bank and never saw the note or the manner in which it was endorsed until late in 1926, and that the McKees, makers of the note, are insolvent and the amount wholly lost to him.

Mrs. Ed Godsey, proprietor of the Godsey Beauty and Art Shoppe, went to Kansas City this morning to attend a style show.
